MATERIAL SAFETY DATA SHEETS Material Safety Data Sheets (MSDS) are available for all products that comprise or contain chemical substances. The customer is advised to consider the safety aspects of each product by reading the MSDS's. The customer should also advise his resale customers similarly. Tools and other items made of solid materials are generally not considered hazardous in the form in which they are shipped. MSDS's on these items are on file and are available on request. However, subsequent operations, such as sharpening, sanding, grinding, heating, brazing, welding, and others, can produce dust and/or vapors of potentially hazardous substances. This is particularly true for steel, carbide, or carbide tips which may contain one or more of the following substances: Tungsten Carbide, Cobalt, Tantalum Carbide, Chromium Carbide, Chromium, Molybdenum Carbide, Vanadium, Cadmium, Copper, Manganese, Molybdenum, Nickel, or Phosphorus. The user is cautioned to avoid all subsequent operations and to refer them to a professional who is aware of the hazards and can perform such operations safely.

ADDITIONAL SAFETY CONSIDERATIONS Safety in the use of hand tools is the responsibility of the user and his/her employer. Personal injury can easily occur if a tool is improperly used or used on the wrong material. The user should be certain that he/she understands the proper methods and techniques of use and that the proper precautions are taken. Eye protection at all times is recommended. Where tools are used for cutting or abrading operations, wear the necessary respiratory, eye, and skin protection. Unplug power tools before adjusting or servicing. Exercise care in all operations and beware of possible dangers to bystanders.
